

Walthamstow Academy – Sociology Curriculum Journey

Our Curriculum Intent

The Sociology department believes that every individual pupil can achieve personal excellence. The department's aim is to develop pupils' understanding of people and the diverse societies in which they lived in their past and present day lives. The department also aims to develop students' understanding of the influence of their setting and environment on human activity by studying a continuum of historical and contemporary perspectives and how society developed alongside these. Sociology is the study of how society is organised and how we experience life. Sociology enables us to understand the structure of society, and connections and patterns in human behaviour. The course is designed to give students the opportunity to focus on their own experience of the social world, whilst encouraging them to build on this knowledge by analysing and reflecting on different aspects of society.

At Walthamstow Academy we take great measures to support our pupils, facilitating engagement in curriculum but also providing students with the necessary set of skills they need to excel in life. Students should appreciate the advances in society that Sociology has made possible - from government researchers that seek to gain knowledge of our society through sociology to the review and implementation of policies related to education, families and crime and deviance. Moreover, the sociology department allows learners to immerse themselves in a new challenge where they can develop a range of skills, from critical thinking, analytical skills – problem solving oriented –, communication skills, research skills, interpersonal skills, and cross-cultural understanding amongst many others. Within the sociology department we aim to develop caring and compassionate individuals who develop an enthusiasm to work within this expanding industry that use the skills that sociology develops.

Our Curriculum Progression Model

KS4

- Students are introduced to the key sociological concepts.
- Students begin with looking at the different sociological perspectives (functionalism, Marxism, feminism and interactionism).
- Students explore the research methods used to establish sociological research, critically evaluating the strengths, weakness and suitability of each method for investigating sociological issues.
- Students contextualise their knowledge of sociological perspectives by applying it to family, education, crime and deviance and social stratification.

KS5

- Students will interpret different trends in achievement according to class, gender and ethnicity.

- Writing skills are refined and refocused to analyse sociological perspectives.
- Students are introduced to new areas of study, such as crime and deviance, theory and methods and beliefs in society
- Students complete extended essay writing

At Key Stage 4, the focus is for students to develop strong subject knowledge of the main sociological concepts and perspectives (Marxism, Feminism, Functionalism and Interactionism) that enable the students to understand how sociology has developed as a subject but also the impact that these perspectives have had in terms of law making and policies that have shaped and changed societal views leading to a more critical understanding of the world around us. Additionally, students learn the scientific method used for sociological research. This allows them to start developing their critical thinking skills, which can be linked to the sociological perspectives.

At Key Stage 5 students are consistently shown the links between theoretical concepts and practical application. Students are given a thorough progressive learning plan to ensure they attain the grades necessary to go to university, yet emphasis is taken on ensuring students see Sociology as a whole subject through holistic teaching. This gives students a thorough understanding of how the different perspectives within the different topics allow for synoptic links to be made that go beyond the subject or the education system and extend to relationships, careers and everyday life.
